

SATURDAY, JULY 19th - STUDIO PERFORMANCE at 4 PM at LEBANON BALLET SCHOOL

Liz Westbrook is a dancer and choreographer from New Hampshire based in NYC. She holds certification in Contemporary Dance from Gibney, studied Dance and Composition at Bennington College, and attended The University of the Arts (BFA, Dance). To make dance, is to build a world. Liz approaches her collaborators with research as a way to invite them into her vision, which they shape together. Their practices become a study to examine and manifest these worlds. She creates these worlds to observe and acknowledge human experience. Recent credits: Katia Tubini, Nadine Gerspacher, Grant Jacoby, Laura Sanchez. She is presenting this work for Moulin/Belle, 7MPR, and creature space.

Headshot by Michael Marlon; Promotional footage by Zora Gamberg

Kate Martel and Jenny Sieruta are dance artists from Western Massachusetts. They have been collaborating together sporadically since 2018. They met while collaborating with Barbie Diewald Choreography in 2017. Both artists have taught throughout Five College Dance and the surrounding Pioneer Valley for nearly a decade. They are currently collaborating performers on Molly Fletcher Lynch-Clark's upcoming new work to be performed this fall. Together they have been exploring rigor, play, grief, nurture, and landscape. This is the second duet they have created.

SATURDAY, JULY 19th - STUDIO PERFORMANCE at 4 PM at LEBANON BALLET SCHOOL

Priya Bangal is a dancer of Odissi, a classical dance from the Eastern Indian state of Odisha. Priya has trained extensively in Odissi and has performed at various venues across New England such as Boston Center for the Arts, Provincetown Dance Festival, Dance Complex, Somerville Theatre and Mayo Street Arts. Her recent work at NACHMO Boston 2022 was described by the Dance Informa magazine as having “an easeful quality” and “beautiful intricacy”. Her work is supported by the Mass Cultural Council and New England Foundation for the Arts.

Photo by Olivia Mood Photography

Stephanie Schramm (she/her) is a movement artist, yoga teacher, and arts administrator originally from NJ and currently based in Burlington, VT. She holds a BA in Dance and BA in Psychology from the University of Massachusetts Amherst where she was immersed in the Five College Dance Program. She studied improvisation, modern, and post-modern contemporary techniques and performed in faculty and student works. Stephanie is currently the Workflow Ambassador at the Flynn, and is training, performing, and making new dance work in and around Burlington.

Photos by Hannah Parker Photography